

The Minnesota Economic Association (MEA)
Announces the Annual

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENT PAPER CONTEST

The competition is open to students who complete their submission while an undergraduate enrolled in a Minnesota or Wisconsin college or university. There are three categories:

Senior Thesis: an original research paper written as the culmination of a student's senior year

Term Paper: an original research paper written as part of a course or the culmination of a term

Economic Communication: This category is distinct from the Thesis and Term categories in that submissions need not be in the form of original written research. Submissions may take the form of a written blog, audio podcast, poster (submitted electronically) or video communicating important and timely economic phenomena; description of new and important research (by others); or policy papers based on the research of others.

A prize of $300 is awarded for the first-place paper, $200 for the second-place paper, and $100 for the third-place paper in each category.

All entrants will receive free registration to the 2019 MEA Annual Conference which will be held on October 25, 2019 at Hamline University.
